Moonshine and Mystery

four songs for young voices, optional descant recorders, and piano

These settings of poems of magic, moonshine, mystery and madness are intended for young voices of any age from primary school upwards.

It is hoped that they will introduce the performers to the way in which words and feelings of previous generations may be reflected in music and that the easy two-part writing will give them confidence in performance.

The part for descant recorders is optional: the piano part is essential.

I would like to encourage the performers to mirror the imagery of the poetry and music by creating their own percussion parts.

In Tom o' Bedlam's song (text anonymous) we hear the moonstruck and not-quite-so-happy fool, and then the early twentieth-century poet Harold Monro conjures up a world of magic in Overheard on a Saltmarsh. A Strange Story (text anonymous) is good plain fun - and a demonstration of the importance of punctuation marks - and finally the sixteenth-century poet Robert Herrick's The Bell-man keeps us from all evil and welcomes the new day.

Total duration: approximately 8 to 9 minutes.

1. Tom o' Bedlam's song

Anon.

Alan Bullard

With graceful movement and a touch of sadness

The musical score is arranged in four systems. The first system shows the beginning of the piece with two vocal staves (1 and 2) and piano accompaniment for recorders and piano. The second system contains the vocal entries and lyrics. The third system continues the piano accompaniment. The fourth system shows the end of the piece with a final bass note marked 8^{\flat} .

An optional descant recorder part is provided. The small notes in the piano need only be played if there are no recorders.

No percussion parts are provided but it is suggested that suitable parts for both pitched and unpitched percussion could be composed by the performers in response to the mood of the words.

The musical score is written for two voices, two recorders, and piano accompaniment. It is in 2/2 time and consists of two systems of music. The first system begins with a first-measure rest for the voices, followed by the lyrics 'I saw a pi-geon I' for voice 1 and 'mak-ing bread' for voice 2. The piano accompaniment features a simple melody in the right hand and a bass line in the left hand. The second system begins with a first-measure rest for the voices, followed by the lyrics 'saw a bak-er I saw a tow-el I saw a mead-ow' for voice 1 and 'made of thread one mile square in the air' for voice 2. The piano accompaniment continues with the same simple melody and bass line. A 'Preview File Only' watermark is visible across the page.
