ISMN M 57020 724 4

After I had written an 8-voice a cappella setting of an ancient Hebrew poem, The Dialogue of God and Zion, for The Clerks' Group in 2000, their director, Edward Wickham, suggested that I write them a work on a larger scale. When the BBC invited The Clerks' Group to sing at a Prom, the opportunity arrived for me to fulfil this request. At the time I was, and still am, working on a radio opera (commissioned by BBC Radio 3) on the legend of the Wandering Jew; as the matter of wandering (with the inevitable issue of whether a particular journey might be cyclic or goal-directed) is a current pre-occupation, the idea for the Five Motets developed rapidly. Edward Wickham requested that I use the Latin Vulgate translation of the Hebrew Bible, another factor which helped shape the overall plan, the cycle alternating Latin settings with English poems of my own, which act as commentaries on the biblical texts.

Judaism and, subsequently, its two younger Mosaic sister religions, Christianity and Islam, while having roots in older rituals and beliefs concerned with what Mircea Eliade called The Myth of the Eternal Return, initiated the concept of a 'contextual' present. This 'birth of a sense of history', and its associated ideas of a God of justice and righteousness with whom an individual may engage in a personal dialogue, involved positive action; the sense that we are mere passive participants in 'the yearly round' was replaced by the idea of a journey, both personal and collective, towards various kinds of Messianic belief. To cite one example, it is of fundamental importance in Judaism that the annual celebration of Pasover is not a remembrance of a past event, but a re-enactment of it, so that the past lives meaningfully in the present. This idea forms the basis of the English texts of the work and affected the plan of the whole.

The Five Motets begin with a description of an outward journey: that of Abram and his family from Ur, in what is modern-day Iraq, to the land of Canaan, in what would become both biblical and contemporary Israel. The first motet sets the Latin Vulgate translation (from Hebrew) of this passage from Genesis, describing God's promise to Abram and the subsequent departure. The second sets a poem (in English) which acts as a questioning commentary on this theme. The third departs from biblical chronology (setting a text from Exodus), but addresses nevertheless the same issue, that of an outward journey, describing the dancing and singing of Miriam, sister of Moses and Aaron, and her female companions on the shore of the Sea of Reeds (the so-called Red Sea) in celebration of the Israelites' freedom from slavery. This is an important and unusual passage, being not only the first song of freedom in (written) literature, but also the first known example of women (as opposed to mythical females) being allotted the leading role in a story. The fourth motet (in English), is a meditation on Jacob's Ladder and mirrors the second, in being a commentary; but in this case, it precedes the piece to which it refers. The latter (the fifth motet) sets the Vulgate once more, setting the wonderful description of Jacob's dream and, again, God's promise to protect and guide, not only 'now', but always. When God speaks to Jacob, he calls his grandfather Abraham whereas, in the earlier Genesis motet, he was still Abram and Jacob sleeps, dreams and receives God's promise on his way to Haran (again, in contemporary Iraq), from where his grandfather had set out. So, in one sense, the circle is completed, but between the two journeys Abram has become Abraham (Father-of-Many-Nations). Having matured spiritually by means of a covenant with God, he has moved on and bequeathed his inheritance to his grandson, Jacob.

Musically, the five pieces form an arc, but without a sense of 'literal' return, the overall voyage acting as a metaphor for the combination in the Judaeo-Christian tradition of both the cyclic (and ritualistic) and the goal-directed. The pitch centres of the pieces are: E, A, B flat, A flat and E and each of the motets addresses a specific compositional issue. The material derives from the 'In Nomine' of the great early Tudor composer John Taverner's mass 'Gloria tibi Trinitas'---- not only are the instrumental pieces in this evening's concert concerned with the four-hundred-year-old 'In Nomine' tradition but, as I began work on the score, the sense of the text of that passage seemed to suit the meaning of the texts which I had selected. The musical grammar throughout, and the elements of this as used syntactically, is the result of strict and methodical procedures of voice-leading and vertical interval control combined with long-range harmonic planning, on which I have been working for many years.

Motet 1 (Latin): this progresses from E to A as the journey is described and, after an initial tutti 'incipit', gradually builds up from two to nine-voice polyphony, 'modulating' modally from Phrygian to Aeolian.

Motet 2 (English): a commentary on the first, it begins where the latter ended, on A. The voices are divided into two groups of four, one continuing the Aeolian mode, the other entering with the same mode transposed to E flat, the tritone difference representing the temporal aspect of the poem, with its question: 'When did they leave for a new land? Yesterday, or this morning...Or was it four thousand years ago?...'

Motet 3 (Latin and English): a choral dance in which the men sing in Latin and English, but always descriptively, the women (allowing for the fact that one of tonight's altos is male!) representing the 'now' with their celebratory ceremony. The superimposition of Latin and English in this piece is a tribute to the 13th and 14th century practice of bilingual motet composition, as well as illustrating the piece's centrality in the cycle by means of such layering (ie: both languages are heard simultaneously and symbolically, one ancient, one modern). The tonal centre, B flat, by being a tritone distant from the opening and closing E pitch centre of the cycle, also symbolises the overall voyage, both literal and spiritual.

Motet 4 (English): like the second, this divides the group into two choirs, and is cast as a chorale prelude. The first choir sings a short prayer, while the second describes Jacob's dream and interprets it. The pitch centre is, 'prophetically', A flat.

Motet 5 (Latin): as the first motet ended with the note which began the second, so the A flat of motet four begins the final piece. With Jacob's realisation of the holiness of the place where he has slept, so the A flat becomes, enharmonically, the major third, G sharp, above the cycle's opening E. The music has returned to its initial pitch, but the context is transformed. The minor third of the 'In Nomine' becomes the major third of fulfilment and hope. The voyage is complete, but has proved to be far from literally cyclical.

I would like to record my thanks to Ms Helenann Francis and Dr Arnd Kerkhecker, colleagues at Worcester College, Oxford, who advised and assisted with biblical interpretation and Latin prosody respectively.

Five Motets is dedicated to my parents, in gratitude.

MOTET 1: (Genesis, chapter 12, verses 1-3) Dixit autem Dominus ad Abram

9 voices (SS,AA,TT,Bar,BB)

dixit autem Dominus ad Abram egredere de terra tua et de cognatione tua et de domo patris tui in terram quam monstrabo tibi macaque te in gentem magnam et benedicam tibi et magnificabo nomen tuum erisque benedictus benedicam benedicentibus tibi et maledicam maledicentibus tibi atque in te benedicent universae cognationes terrae

Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto the land that I will shew thee: And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed.

MOTET 2: Distant, a family travels

8 voices/2 choirs (S, TT, B and AA, Bar, B)

Distant, a family travels, Time-laden,
When did they leave for a new land?
Yesterday, or this morning, as the light woke,
Their journey of ages melted in the furnace of centuries,
Memory ingrained in the sand?
Or was it four thousand years ago,
Another voyage in a far-off place?
What did they seek,
Why did they travel,
As the light broke?

MOTET 3: (Exodus, chapter 15, verses 19 and 20) Down the ages a song has echoed

9 voices (SS,AA,TT,Bar,BB)

MEN:

ingressus est equus Pharaon
cum curribus et equitibus in mare

For the horse of Pharaoh went with his
chariots and with his horsemen into the sea

Down the ages a song has echoed,
Distant,
The echoing song sounds across centuries

ingressus est equus Pharaeo cum curribus et equitibus in mare et reduxit super eos Dominus aquas maris
filii autem Israhel ambulaverunt

per siccum in medio eius sumpsit ergo Maria prophetis soror Aaron tympanum in manu
egressaeque sunt mulieres post eam
cum tympanis et choris

Open, Time's gates reveal
the dance of centuries
as the women sing;
new song, ancient dance,
present,
distant,
now,
as then.

WOMEN:

Distant, yet present,
Then, as now,
Dancing and singing,
Swaying, calling,
As waves of freedom
Furl, deliver us, unbound,
On the reed shore
With salt of blessing, not tears.
Tambourines ring,
Bracelets shine,
Exile ended,
A desert journey begun.
Spirits unshackled,
The sea our salvation,
This shore our hope.
Miriam, celebrant,
Leading, rejoicing.
With myriad sounds
We whirl, wait, watch,
Free, unfettered,
Praising.
The faith of ages
We praise with sun-drenched hallelujah cries
Of hope re-born.

For the horse of Pharaoh went with his
chariots and with his horse men into the sea
and the Lord brought again the waters of the sea upon them; but the children of Israel went on dry land

in the midst of the sea.

And Miriam the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances.

MOTET 4: Returning, wander weary

9 voices/2 choirs (SS,AA and TT, Bar, BB)

Choir 2:

Returning, wander weary,
Weighed down by what will be,
He sleeps, softly,
On pillow'd stone.
When did his journey begin,
How far has he travelled,
Alone?
Solitary in this place he seems,
But through his dream
All generations wake.
Stirring, sleep refreshed,
He stands on sun-warmed earth,
As a voyage of centuries
Leads to the light.

Choir 1:

Lord, grant him rest,
May he sleep in peace.
Grant us angel dreams
That we may know your light.

MOTET 5: (Genesis, chapter 28, verses 10-13 and 15-17) Igitur egressus Iacob

9 voices (SS,AA,TT,Bar,BB)

Igitur egressus Iacob de Bersabee pergebat Haran cumque venisset ad quendam locum et vellet in eo requiescere post solis occubitum tulit de lapidibus qui iacebant et subponens capiti suo dormivit in eodem loco vidiisque in somnis scalam stantem super terram et cacumen illius tangens caelum angelos quoque Dei ascendentis et descendentes per eam et Dominum innixum scalae dicentem sibi:
ego sum Dominus Deus Abraham patris tui et Deus Isaac terram in qua dormis tibi dabo et semini tuo et ero custos tuus quocumque perreveres et reducam te in terram hanc nec dimittam nisi complevero universa quae dixi cumque evigilasset Iacob de somno ait:
Vere Dominus est in loco isto et ego nesciebam pavensque quam terribilis inquit est locus iste nin est hic aliud nisi domus Dei et porta caeli.

And Jacob went out from Beersheba, and toward Haran. And he lighted upon a certain place, and tarried there all night, because the sun was set; and he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep. And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it. And, behold, the Lord stood above it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the god of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed... and , behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land: for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, and he said, Surely the Lord is in this place: and I knew it not. And he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

The musical score consists of six staves, each representing a different voice part: Soprano (S.), Tenor (T.), Tenor (T.), Bass (B.), Alto (A.), and Bass (B.). The music is in common time, and the key signature changes from G major (no sharps or flats) to A major (one sharp) at the beginning of the score, and then to A minor (one flat) for the remainder. The vocal parts are arranged in two groups: Soprano and Tenor in the upper half, and Bass and Alto in the lower half. The lyrics are integrated into the musical lines, with some words underlined. Dynamic markings such as forte (f), mezzo-forte (mp), piano (p), and sforzando (3) are placed above the notes. The bass staff contains a blue watermark reading "Preview File Only". The score is numbered 32 at the top left.
